WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEB. 4, 1863.

The New York Times says that "the work of raising the sunken war vessels at Norfolk and Hampton Roads, is actively and successfully progressing." By the time the news reaches the Times that Rebel cannon are sinking them in Charleston harbor they will disagree that vessel raising is an expensive amusement. Before they raise any more ships they will have to "raise a little more wind."

Gen. Beauregard in his recent New York speech and palaver said: "Whoever believes in God—must believe in our ultimate victory." Whoever believes there's a Hell—must believe it was made for such men as Butler.

The slave Patrick, (belonging to a Mr. John Wilkinson, of Augusta,) under sentence of death for attempting to commit a rape upon a white woman, expiated his crime on the gallows near Augusta, on the 30th ult.

The Yankees are again "digging the canal" at Vicksburg Bend. They are "heavy" on the "canal" anyhow. Their army is made up of that material.

Congress is giving its attention in good earnest to the subjects of currency and finance.

The adjourned Press Convention meets at Augusta, to-morrow.

LETTER FROM TULLAHOMA.

[Special Correspondence of the Daily Rebel.]

TULLAHOMA, TENN., Jan. 30, 1863.

A military execution took place to-day. W. G. Ackerman, a private in Company G, 1st Louisiana Infantry, deserted from his command October 5, 1862, near Lancaster, Kentucky, and afterwards joined an Ohio Regiment which was engaged in the fight at Murfreesboro' on Wednesday 31st December, and a portion of which were taken prisoners.

The prisoners were paroled as fast as they were brought to Murfreesboro, and Ackerman was duly paroled with the others, but on Friday morning after the battle, Gen. Bragg directed that three hundred of the paroled Federals be sent to the battle-field to bury the Federal dead. About twelve hundred were on the cars for Chattanooga, and the three hundred were taken from this number and sent to the field. Shortly after arriving on the field, one of the 1st Louisiana Regiment recognized Ackerman and pointed him out to an officer who ordered him to be returned to Chattanooga to the Provost Marshal. He was afterwards fully identified by officers and men of his former Regiment, and was placed in close confinement.

He was brought from Murfreesboro' to this Post, where he was tried by a general Court Martial, and sentenced to be executed on Friday 30th January, in the presence of the 1st Louisiana Infantry.

At 3 o'clock the firing detail of twelve men were drawn up before the Provost Guard House, and the prisoner was brought out and seated on his coffin in the wagon, guarded by eight men, and proceeded to the execution ground, the drum and fife playing the solemn notes of the dead march.

Arriving at the ground the prisoner was conveyed to the stake, before which the first Louisiana Infantry were drawn up in line of battle, and was securely tied thereto, the firing detail were marched to, within twelve paces of the prisoner. The proceedings and sentence of the Court were then read by the Adjutant of the Regiment, after which the prisoner said: "Good-bye boys." The order was then given, ready—aim—fire; four bullets entered the body of the prisoner, his head fell on the left side, and gradually settled on his breast; he was killed instantly—his last words "take good aim" were uttered at the word aim, another second and he was launched into eternity. He died bravely, refusing to have his eyes bandaged, and standing firm and motionless. He was a native of Germany, about twenty-five years old, and five feet seven inches in height.

After examination by the Surgeon, he was placed in his coffin and carried off for burial, and the detail that had but a few moments since marched to the air of the "Dead March" returned to camp with the quick step to the tune of "Dixie."

"Dixie."

The dismissal of Fitz John Porter from the army is imputed to the fact that he is a friend to McClellan.

William Carters, vs.

Alfred M. Cates and others,

In Chancery, at Harrison.

It appearing that the defendant, Alfred M. Cates, has abandoned from the State of Tennessee, so that the ordinary process of the court cannot be served on him.

It is therefore ordered, that publication be made weekly for four weeks in the Rebel, a newspaper published at Chattanooga, Tennessee, requiring said defendant to appear in the circuit court of the County of Harrison, in Harrison, on the second Monday of June next, and answer complaint of plaintiff, covered with railroads front, the whole looking as if it could resist the utmost force of mankin shot.

To the dear family of the defenders of the Post of Arkansas, from the numerous guns of the rebels, who have been captured most formidable defences, and have inflicted an irreparable loss.

The elasticity of the fort presented a formidable opposition, and the fort seemed to justify the boasting that it could not be taken.

There was a thickness of three-eighth of solid timber covered with railroads front, the whole looking as if it could resist the utmost force of mankin shot.
